
Each DIC point is worth far less than one independent sample. This inflates σ by $\sqrt{\kappa}$, but a factor common to both experiments cancels from $\hat{\theta}$ exactly, because every $\mathbf{H}_i$ is the identity.